Arizona couple takes the fear out of disaster by offering a plan

TUCSON, ARIZONA (THE BRAMFORD TIMES) - When they embarked on their journey to create a disaster and emergency preparedness manual for first responders, volunteers and schools, Bill and Janet Liebsch could not have had any idea what kind of an impact their work would have.

With the threat of terrorism ever present and the recent earthquake disasters around the world, we are surrounded by constant reminders that being prepared and having a plan saves lives.

It's a Disaster and What Are You Gonna Do About It? has a resource plan for every potential disaster, whether man-made or natural. In an age where Islamic extremists plot and plan daily, preparing for the next attack on innocent lives and where earthquakes and natural disasters seem to dominate the evening news, we have to wonder why this book is not a fixture in every local, state and federal disaster and emergency agency.

Give it time. When we got a copy of this book we were amazed at the wealth of information to prepare our families for every potential crisis. You name it, it's in there. This book should be in every home, every church, synagogue and every library. The book is revolutionary in the way we look at emergency and disaster preparedness and we tip our hat here at The Bramford Times to Bill and Janet Liebsch, who were named among the 2010 Homeland TV Award Winners this year, for the vision and efforts to provide the public with this vital information. This is our pick of the week.
